

Why do people have such a hard time with the “blue” path? From the Google Earth view at left, it appears it’s about the buildings.

It appears that people guess that the directions take walkers right up to a door, and then that paths avoid other buildings.

In both panels, solid thin blue lines show the “correct” path, and the dotted blue lines shows a typical walker’s actual route.

Note: coordinates and instructions have been double-checked.